The Face of Western Carolina College . . .

It is the face of a buliding that you pass each day.

It is the face of an administrator you seldom see.

It is the face of a teacher that you will always remember.

Most of all, it is YOUR face and the face of the person next to you.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Students.

The Editor of the Catamount has invited me to write a brief preface to the current volume. It is suggested that the message relate largely to the development of the college.

From September 1949 to the present time it has been my happy privilege to serve you as President of Western Carolina College with the exception of a short interim in 1956-57. Even during that time the nature of my duties made it possible for me to remain in close touch with the college.

It is difficult to express in words the sense of satisfaction I have realized in being a part of the development of this college. During this time the institution has grown through periods of major expansion, in enrollment, in faculty, in academic offering and in the erection of many fine physical facilities. In every case the various buildings have contributed to the well-being of students and have made it possible for you to live and work more comfortably and to greater purpose. Since this phenomenal growth, second highest among state institutions, has taken place at a college located near the borders of three other states, in an area with the least population and with the lowest per capita income the development generously has been referred to as "the miracle of the hills" and "the miracle of the mountains".

Even now we are facing the single greatest period of growth we have yet known. Think of it! We are in the process of utilizing more than six million dollars to erect much needed buildings, including a student center and other facilities to provide for additional young people who desire to enroll here. This amount represents about two-thirds of the present valuation of the college; thus in one jump we are adding immeasurably to the service which this college can perform. In addition we are requesting a similar amount of the 1965 General Assembly which should make possible an enrollment of about 4,000 students.

This record of growth sounds impressive. It is impressive. However, there is yet another consideration of greater importance. Those of us who love Western Carolina College are dedicated to the cause of moving forward always into the broader arenas of spiritual, educational and cultural growth. If this were not so, then there would be little of permanent worth in erecting more buildings.

Now as Western Carolina College goes into its 75th anniversary year let us all pledge our continued efforts in behalf of our Alma Mater. Let me ask of you students that you devote your time and talents to the best interests of our college with the realization that both your growth and that of the institution will continue through the years thus helping to make a better society in which to live.

THE STUDENTS

A year in college is many things. It is an experience of learning and growing, of going places and doing things. It is a year of laughing, talking, and of quietness.

It is a time when our lives are deepened by sound and color, and magnified by the importance of our purpose.

Let's walk down the path of that college experience together . . .

IN SERVICE PROGRAM

Mr. Jim Norman, Director

In 1959, the In-Service program began at Western Carolina to serve industries and businesses in Western North Carolina by furthering the education of their personnel. The program was originally planned as extension training in co-operation with Enka Corporation, but has since been enlarged to include any person meeting admission standards. Industries now sending students include Enka Corporation; Champion Paper, Inc.; General Electric; Beacon Industries; Gerber Products Company; Dayco Southern Carporation; and Kearfort.

The In-Service program is a six-year study course culminating in a degree of Bachelor of Science in Business Administration. The students in this In-Service program—the only one of its kind in our country—take courses essentially the same as those of resident students seeking a degree in business administration.

In Memory

Dean A. K. Hines

Many persons have contributed significantly through the years to the development of Western Carolina College, and Dean A. K. Hinds is one of those who has contributed maximally to this development. For 31 years he served the institution in an efficient, dedicated manner, first as Instructor of Mathematics, later as head of the Mathematics Department, and, since 1958, Dean of the College, During these yeors the college hos had many problems resulting from growth, especially the curriculum and oll phases of the instructional program.

It is impossible to measure the value of his contribution. It is to be found in the hearts and minds of those whom he taught and of those with whom he served.

His activities reflect an observance of the rules of live on the very highest level. He will be sorely missed by all of us, but the quality of his service will be an inspiration for our future activities.—PAUL A. REID

Editor's Note

In retrospect, I would like to explain briefly the editorial policy that we have followed in the production of this book.

We asked what makes up a year at Western Carolina College. The answer was, not only the social events that happen during a year, but the academic part of the year, also. More than likely, in years to come you will remember a class, subject, or teacher just as vividly as a football game, basketball game, or dance.

So we have tried to put in many things that have not been in this yearbook before: a separate student life section, a section devoted to the academic departments of the school, and a citation for the person whom we think most deserves a "pat on the back" for his work with the students.

In putting in these new sections we have tried not to leave out many of the standard features of The Catamount, but to compress them slightly.

Realizing that we can not put in pictures of everything that happens, we have tried to symbolize all that happens. We hope that no matter when you look through this book it will bring back memories of the things that happened to you.
